

Scammers

Oh ginger snaps!

Scammers can pretend to sell a product for a low price but in the end you receive a worthless object after you spent the money.

Ex. "You want iPad? You give 500$ I give you iPad ^_^"

There can be scammers on online dating sites. So they may try to ask you to get them plane tickets to go somewhere. When in reality, the girl of your dreams is a 50 year old man that has no life with a criminal record that wants to take you on an "adventure".

Always be hesitant about emails that ask for personal information. Contact the company that has emailed you to double check if the email is real. Even if it looks official, it may be scammers trying to get your bank pin or some other type of information that allows them to take money from you.

By:
Wesley

